American Command is a unique course that describe command as a way of life for the American fire officer and senior firefighter. Command is personal and leadership is based on Command and Control. We are all leaders all of the time. Learning how to advance skills and knowledge in the art and science of firefighting is the basis of command. This interactive program will cover an overview of the command phenomena, include an analysis of today’s field issues and trends, and engage in reflection and discussion regarding command issues the American fire service.

Situational Awareness and Size-up in today’s fire service needs both! The fires today are getting hotter and buildings are getting weaker. Size-up is more necessary then ever to read what the building is giving us. Maintaining situation is also vital important to the mission. Is the team capable, trained, and ready to complete the current task? This is a class in reading the building and understanding what we might face when we make entry and understanding how team dynamics might affect the mission.
